Non-Bell Telephone Operating Companies by States

This section lists every city and town in the United States having a telephone exchange of commercial size—other than those associated with the Bell Operating Companies.

In this compilation of non-Bell telephone company exchanges, the listing is arranged by state and then alphabetically by community where the headquarters and exchanges are located, or in which they operate.

A numeric code (see below) preceding the exchange name indicates the size of the company by total number of access lines. This is followed by statistical data relating to that exchange in parenthesis (if served by the company), and the name, address and telephone number of that company or its operating headquarters. If the operating headquarters is in another city or state, a reference is given. A reference is also provided to the company's operating group affiliation or other association by ownership or management. For additional information, see the Operating HQ or affiliate listing in the Operating Group Section.

The listing continues with exchanges served, key personnel, and line data. Various plant data includes: Sheath miles of aerial cable, underground cable (in duct), and buried cable; Conductor (pair) miles of wire for open wire, wire within aerial cable, underground (in duct), and direct buried; Coaxial cable miles; Pole line miles; Underground conduit in trench and duct miles; Toll, exchange and station carrier by number of channels and route miles; Number of microwave "hops" and channel miles.

Also shown is the purchasing responsibility and financial statistics, such as annual operating revenues, total plant investment, and construction budgets for '85, '86, '87. If furnished, REA borrowers are so identified.

An alphabetical list of companies at the end of each state gives the main exchange city under which headquarters information is shown for a company. We have attempted, as much as possible, to list companies in the states in which they operate, although in some instances, multiple state operations prevent uniformity.

1—Over 100,000 Access Lines
2—75,000 to 99,999 Access Lines
3—50,000 to 74,999 Access Lines
4—30,000 to 49,999 Access Lines
5—20,000 to 29,999 Access Lines
6—10,000 to 19,999 Access Lines
7— 7,500 to 9,999 Access Lines
8— 5,000 to 7,499 Access Lines
9— 2,500 to 4,999 Access Lines
10— 1,000 to 2,499 Access Lines
11— 750 to 999 Access Lines
12— 500 to 749 Access Lines
13—Less than 499 Access Lines

Figures following name of town or city indicate number of access lines at that place only.

AL —Access Lines
ES —Electronic
CDO—Community Dial Office
ADO—Attended Dial Office
TC —Toll Center
SXS—Step-by-Step
XB —Crossbar
ESS—Electronic Switching System
DIG—Digital

Customer Premise Equipment —Service & Supplies (Interconnects)

This section contains CPE companies—firms that sell or lease telephone terminal equipment for interconnection to telephone company lines—listed alphabetically by city within each state. Canada, Puerto Rico and Virgin Islands companies that supplied information are listed at the end of the section.

The following information was requested from each company: mailing address, telephone/telex number, company president, sales manager, number of employees, number of service personnel, sell/service data comm equipment and brands of PBXs and key systems handled. Parent Co. and its location is also listed where applicable.

The code (in parentheses) preceding the company name indicates type of company or affiliation. See below.

Carriers plan $24 billion outlay in 1986

As both local exchange carriers (LECs) and interexchange carriers (IXCs) continue to upgrade their networks in 1986, they will spend an estimated $24 billion for new and replacement equipment.

CARRIERS will continue to upgrade their networks in 1986 in pursuit of the sophisticated business user. As they did in 1985, fiber optic cable and digital switches will fuel the chase.

Carriers in the United States, including both local exchange carriers (LECs) and interexchange carriers (IXCs), plan to spend $24.009 billion in 1986 for new and replacement equipment (Table 1). In 1985, U.S. carriers spent an estimated $24.06 billion for equipment, so spending is expected to slow slightly this year. However, early indications are that spending will pick up again in 1987, when carriers will spend an estimated $24.3 billion.

The source

This article is based on the 1986 Carrier Market Forecast, this year's version of an annual study done by TELEPHONY's Market Research Dept. The study is available to the public. For more information, contact Market Research Director Czatdana Inan, TELEPHONY, 55 E. Jackson Blvd., Suite 1100W, Chicago, Ill. 60604; telephone: (312) 922-2435.

LECs again will outspend IXCs by a large margin in 1986. LECs will spend an estimated $20.194 billion in 1986, a full 84% of total carrier expenditures. IXCs will spend $3.815 billion this year.

The regional holding companies (RHCs) will account for the largest portion of carrier expenditures in 1986, reflecting their overwhelming importance in the LEC industry. The RHCs will spend an estimated $14.64 billion in 1986, up from their estimated expenditures of $14.60 billion in 1985. Four of the RHCs will increase their expenditures slightly in 1986, while three will cut theirs.

Bell Atlantic, which spent an estimated $2.028 billion in 1985, is expected to spend $2.081 billion in 1986. BellSouth is expected to increase its outlay from $2.549 billion in 1985 to $2.684 billion in 1986. Nynex is expected to boost its annual investment from $2.045 billion last year to $2.077 billion in 1986. And Southwestern Bell is expected to spend $2.123 billion in 1986, up from the $1.996 billion it invested in 1985.

The three trimmers will be Ameritech, Pacific Telesis and U S West. Ameritech spent an estimated $1.958 billion last year and is expected to cut that outlay slightly to $1.946 billion in 1985. Pacific Telesis is expected to spend $2.021 billion in 1986, down from the estimated $2.186 billion it spent last year. And U S West, which spent an estimated $1.84 billion in 1985, is expected to cut its expenditures to $1.707 billion.

Four of the seven RHCs spent more than $2 billion in 1985. In 1986, five of the seven are expected to surpass the $2 billion level. Only Ameritech and U S West are expected to invest less than $2 billion this year. And Ameritech will fall only about $50 million short of the $2 billion market.

There is nothing particularly significant about $2 billion, except that it obviously is a lot of money. The important point is what lies behind the naked numbers: The RHCs are determined to stick to their plans to upgrade their networks and vigorously compete for the lucrative large business customer by providing sophisticated, network-based services. The precise amount that one or another RHC spends, whether that amount increases slightly or decreases slightly or if that amount is a little more than or a little less than $2 billion per year, is much less important than the fact that all seven RHCs have mapped similar strategies and are methodically investing in their networks to bring those strategies to fruition.

Behind all that money lies a commitment to compete where the competition is fiercest.

The 18 largest Independents, a group which includes the traditional Independents plus Cincinnati Bell and Southern New England Tel (SNET), have come to conclusions which closely resemble the RHCs', judging by their spending plans.

'The RHCs are determined to stick to their plans to upgrade their networks and vigorously compete for the lucrative large business customer by providing sophisticated, network-based services.'

The 18 largest Independents are expected to spend $4.721 billion in 1986, up from the estimated $4.508 billion they spent in 1985. Only 6 of the 18 companies—Alltel, Cincinnati Bell, Rochester, Century, Anchorage, Illinois Consolidated—are expected to spend less in 1986 than they spent in 1985. Alltel, Century, Anchorage and Illinois Consolidated expect the difference to be marginal. Cincinnati Bell is expected to spend $66.7 million in 1986, after spending an estimated $85.2 million in 1985. Rochester spent an estimated $90.6 million in 1985, an outlay which it is expected to reduce to $68.8 million in 1986.

The five largest Independents are all expected to increase their expenditures in 1986. GTE, which spent an estimated $2.365 billion in 1985, is expected to invest $2.499 billion in 1986. Only BellSouth among all carriers is expected to spend more in 1986 than GTE.

United is expected to spend $568 million in 1986, a slight increase over the estimated $564 million it spent in 1985. Contel is expected to spend $443 million this year, up from the estimated $438 million it spent last year. SNET, which spent an estimated $245 million in 1985, is expected to increase its expenditures for equipment to $285 million in 1986. Centel is expected to spend $185 million in 1986, up from the $170 million it spent last year. Puerto Rico Tel, after spending an estimated $135 million in 1985, is expected to spend $160 million in 1986.

Altogether, the five top Independents are expected to spend $3.980 billion in 1986 after laying out an estimated $3.782 billion in 1985.

TDS is expected to spend $29.9 million in 1986, up from the $27.5 million it spent last year. Lincoln is expected to spend $33.2 million in 1986 after spending an estimated $32.6 million in 1985. Pacific Telecom, which spent an estimated $36.5 million in 1985, is expected to boost its expenditures to $46 million.

Commonwealth is expected to spend $33.9 million in 1986, up from the $23.8 million it is estimated to have spent last year. Citizens Utilities is expected to spend $28 million in 1986, considerably more than the $21.2 million it is estimated to have spent in 1985. CP National, which spent an estimated $19.2 million in 1985, is expected to spend $21 million in 1986. The other LECs are expected to spend $833.1 million in 1986, up from the $795.5 million they are estimated to have spent in 1985.

Besides their shared interest in capturing as many business customers as possible, the LECs have a recent history of sustained growth to buoy their investment planners. With the exception of 1984, and using estimated totals for 1985-86, the LECs have steadily increased their plant investment, expenses and, most importantly, their revenues (Table 2).

The business picture looks different from the IXCs' point of view. The five major IXCs are expected to spend $3.815 billion in 1986, down from the estimated $4.155 billion they spent in 1985 (Table 3). The big three IXCs—AT&T Communications, MCI and GTE Sprint—are expected to reduce their outlays. AT&T Communications is expected to spend $1.9 billion in 1986, down from the estimated $2.041 billion it spent last year. MCI, which spent an estimated $1.05 billion in 1985, is expected to spend $900 million in 1986. GTE Sprint is expected to spend $600 million this year, after spending an estimated $700 million last. US Telecom, after spending an estimated $325 million in 1985, is expected to spend the same amount this year. ALC Communications, the company recently formed when Allnet and Lexitel finalized their merger, spent an estimated $38.9 million in 1985 and is expected to spend $90 million this year.

Switching and transmission technology will dominate the LECs' expenditures in 1986 (Figure 1). Switching will consume 28% of total 1986 LEC expenditures, while transmission cable will take 29.7%. Fiber optic cable will consume 3.6% of total LEC expenditures. Together, switches and cable will account for 57.7% of LEC outlays in 1986.

Sophisticated digital switches and high capacity fiber optic cable hold the keys to the hearts and wallets of demanding business customers. Business customers account for a small proportion—17.5%— of total access lines (Figure 2). But they are easily the most important revenue generators. They are also the telecommunications consumers with the most options.

The RHCs have decided to bring full capability to business users as rapidly as possible. Table 4 summarizes the RHCs' spending plans for fiber optics in 1986. Digital switches are of equal importance in the competition for business customers. Currently, the 18 largest Independents have a larger percentage of digital switches than their RHC counterparts. The Independents have 8048 switches, of which 31% are digital, while only 6% of the RHCs' 9139 switches currently are digital (Figure 3).

The coming year promises to witness the acceleration of the already hot pursuit of the large business customer by the carrier industry. In order to woo those business customers successfully, the carriers will rely heavily on digital switches and fiber optic transmission links. All the carriers intend to bolster their networks by investing heavily, particularly in the two key technologies. ☐

The International Telecommunication Union is an intergovernmental organization which exists to ensure the development of international telecommunications. It is composed of four permanent organs: The General Secretariat; the International Frequency Registration Board (IFRB); the International Radio Consultative Committee (CCIR); and the International Telegraph and Telephone Consultative Committee (CCITT).

The CCITT is concerned primarily with the operation of international telecommunication systems. Its official mandate reads "The duties of the (CCITT) shall be to study technical, operating, and tariff questions relating to telegraph and telephone and to issue recommendations on them." It is composed of: a Director; a Secretariat (permanently located in Geneva); an experimental laboratory; 15 study groups (which make recommendations); two joint study groups and two joint CCIR/CCITT working parties (which study topics of common interest), five plan committees (to develop a plan for the international telecommunications network, especially concerned with developing nations) and five special autonomous groups (which develop technical handbooks for five developing nations).

World telecom spending moves ahead again after down period

Fore·cast

Cover art by Sharon K. Manjack

World telecommunications spending, after a couple of slow years, is expected to increase slightly for the next serveral years. But predicting the longer term future is risky.

CZATDANA INAN, MARKET RESEARCH DIRECTOR, and LARRY LANNON, EXECUTIVE EDITOR

WORLD TELECOMMUNICATIONS spending will increase in 1986, but by very little.

In addition, the international telecommunications industry continues to be characterized by two types of participants: wealthy countries with sophisticated, nationwide communications infrastructures and developing countries with communications infrastructures inadequate to meet their needs and with little if any capital available to invest. The communications infrastructures of the developing countries continue to lag far behind the networks being maintained and expanded by the developed countries, a structural characteristic which bodes ill for the general economic competitiveness of the developing world.

Approximately $83 billion will be spent worldwide on telecommunications goods and services this year, up from the roughly $77 billion which was spent last year (Table 1). In real terms, however, worldwide spending will increase by only about 1.2%.

However small the spending increase will be in real terms, it does represent the first increase in the past 2 years. In fact, the recent trend has been for spending to decrease. In 1984, real spending decreased by 5.7% and in 1985 it was down by 3%.

Our annual international spending report is based on verified reports made by national telecommunications administrations and, where applicable, major private telecommunications service providers in January 1986, as well as estimates made by TELEPHONY, as indicated in Table 1.

Any analysis of international telecommunications spending must consider economic factors external to the telecommunications industry itself. Currently, the two dominant external factors are fluctuations in the value of the U.S. dollar and the rate of inflation.

Over the past 11 months, the value of f: Assumes Nippon Telegraph & Telephone will stabilize spending at 1985 level.

the dollar has fallen 20% against other major currencies. Recently, however, the dollar has risen in response to plunging oil prices. That reversal is likely to be short-lived, as the effects of recent cuts in oil prices again subordinate themselves to the stated policies of the powerful "Group of Five" industralized nations.

The Group of Five consists of the U.S., Japan, West Germany, France and the U.K. In order to improve deteriorating U.S. trade balances, the Group of Five has adopted a policy of favoring a lower exchange rate for the dollar, thus, among other things, making goods produced in the U.S. more attractive in foreign markets. The Group of Five has affirmed its intention to pursue that policy since the latest drop in world oil prices.

The decline in the dollar during the last 11 months has pushed exchange rates for major currencies back to 1983 levels, combating inflationary tendencies and promoting the first real growth in world telecommunications spending since 1983. Our study conservatively assumes that there will be a 3.5% inflation rate for the period 1983-87. Thus, if world telecommunications spending in 1986 were to remain at the same level as 1983 spending, the world would spend about $82 billion this year. The $0.9 billion difference between $82 billion and the actual projected expenditure of $82.9 billion represents the real growth in world telecommunications spending. The world is expected to increase its telecommunications spending by 1.2% again in 1987. That would provide a figure of about $85.9 billion expressed in current dollars, which is 1.2% over the $84.9 billion benchmark figure for 1987.

For the time being anyway, the importance of inflation for the global telecommunications industry thus seems to be receding. In national terms, however, inflation continues to play a dominant role in many cases.

As always general conclusions drawn about the international telecommunications industry may be perfectly valid and even useful, but also may actually obscure the reality that the differences among nations are as great if not greater than ever. For instance, the rate of inflation varies throughout Europe; consequently, inflation outstripped telecommunications spending by a full 2.1% in 1984 in France, while telecommunications spending in Sweden surpassed the rate of inflation by a whopping 7.9%. And the differences between the developing nations and the developed nations are so great they make differences between developed countries look insignificant.

A group of 10 countries—Canada and the U.S. in North America; France, West Germany, Italy, the Netherlands, Sweden and the U.K. in Europe; and Japan and Taiwan in the Far East—will spend $51.2 billion in 1986, a full 62% of total world telecommunications spending. If South Korea and Australia are included, the top dozen countries will account for roughly two-thirds of world spending, or $53.6 billion.

Four of that group of 12 countries are located in the Far East, which reflects that region's growing importance in both the international telecommunications industry and the world economy. If the U .S. and Canada are included among Pacific Basin countries, it becomes clear that the long dominant Atlantic axis (Europe-North America) is rapidly ceding place to a muscular Pacific axis. Figure 1 examines the distribution of telecommunications investments in Japan, South Korea, Taiwan, Thailand, Singapore and Hong Kong in greater depth.

graphic distribution of the 12 countries which dominate international telecommunications spending also illustrates the extent of the problem facing most developing nations. None of the 12 countries are located in Africa or Central or South America. Nor are any located in Western or Southern Asia. Only Korea, in fact, is located on the Asian mainland. None of the 12 belongs to the Soviet bloc of countries.

Telecommunications development requires investment and the necessary investment is being made largely in countries with the most competitive and developed national economies. Most of the world's population does not live in those countries and cannot expect to benefit much from the modest surge in international telecommunications investment expected during the coming 2 years. But the real threat to developing countries lies not in the present but the future.

Mexico is one developing country facing difficult decisions. The national economy has been in the doldrums for several years, and was further damaged by the most recent rounds of oil price cuts. The country is already burdened with a massive national debt. And the tragic earthquake which devastated Mexico City last fall imposed an additional financial weight on shoulders already carrying a heavy load.

Telefonos de Mexico (TELMEX) is determined to accelerate the development of the country's telecommunications infrastructure. The heavy damage done by the earthquake to its facilities in central Mexico City seem to have increased the resolve of its decision-makers. TELMEX plans to spend $850.7 million in 1986 and $945.9 million in 1987, dramatic increases from the $505.6 million spent in 1985 and nearly double the $477.3 million spent in 1984. Figure 2 examines the distribution of services and investments in Mexico in more detail.

Where will the money come from? In 1984, Mexico's economy, though battered, was in better condition than it is today and the country did not have to contend with the effects of the earthquake. Oil prices were higher a few years ago, and Mexico depends on its oil earnings to pay its foreign debt and, eventually, to fuel economic growth. The falling price of the dollar does help some countries, but the price of the Mexican peso is falling even faster.

Yet if TELMEX does not pursue a program of accelerated development, Mexico's position in the competitive world economy will be further jeopardized. Mexico's dilemma, though particularly hard, is characteristic of the problem which faces all developing countries.

Countries which lack competitive telecommunications infrastructures find it difficult to compete in the world economy. As developed countries spend more and more on their telecommunications systems, developing countries which do not respond in kind find themselves less and less competitive. In the contemporary world, sophisticated telecommunications infrastructures are not the effect of economic prosperity, they are one of its primary causes. ☐
